

Supernova remnants are the leftovers of big stars that blew up a long time ago. Gamma-rays are a great way to see them and the high-energy particles they produce.